Dear George:

STAT I am writing this letter to STAT call your attention to [redacted] STAT [redacted] of Brookline, N.H., who has recently applied for a job at your recruitment office in Boston.

STAT [redacted] has served with the Army in Vietnam for the past year in various positions, particularly in the Delta. He came to my attention before he went over because he tried to learn something about the country.
As you know, that is rare. He and I have kept in touch since his return, and I know he has kept up his interest.

I cannot vouch for his general qualifications, since I do not know him well enough and do not know what your people want. But if you need somebody with knowledge and interest in your particular shop, I suggest your looking at his file.

Sally and I will return to Washington in September and look forward to seeing you.

As Always,

STAT
